Dear Jack,

I hope this e-mail finds you well. I am writing to apologize for my yesterday fault.

I really wanted to make our code better, but I completely forgot about the changes that your colleague had implemented before it. As result your team have been fixing an unexpected bug since early morning. I guarantee that this situation will never happen later. I have taught a very important lesson.

Please let me know if it still remains some other problems with our program. I will do my best to correct everything.

Yours sincerely,

Adam Brown

Corrected variant

Dear Jack,

I hope this email finds you well. I am writing to apologize for my mistake yesterday.

I truly wanted to improve our code, but I completely forgot about the changes your colleague had implemented earlier. As a result, your team has been fixing an unexpected bug since early this morning. I assure you that such a situation will never happen again — I have learned a very important lesson.

Please let me know if there are still any other issues with our program. I will do my best to correct everything.

Yours sincerely,
 Adam Brown